Aschoff Reiz-Test: BioBracelet by SWISS HARMONY

20.04.2016

The Aschoff-Test is an approved test method protected by patent in the Federal Patent Department of Germany. In the Aschoff-Test the skin resistance of the ten ting points of the proband`s left hand are metered with a device called the BIO OHM TESTER.

The higher the skin resistance data is, the worse is the bio-energetical condition of the proband.

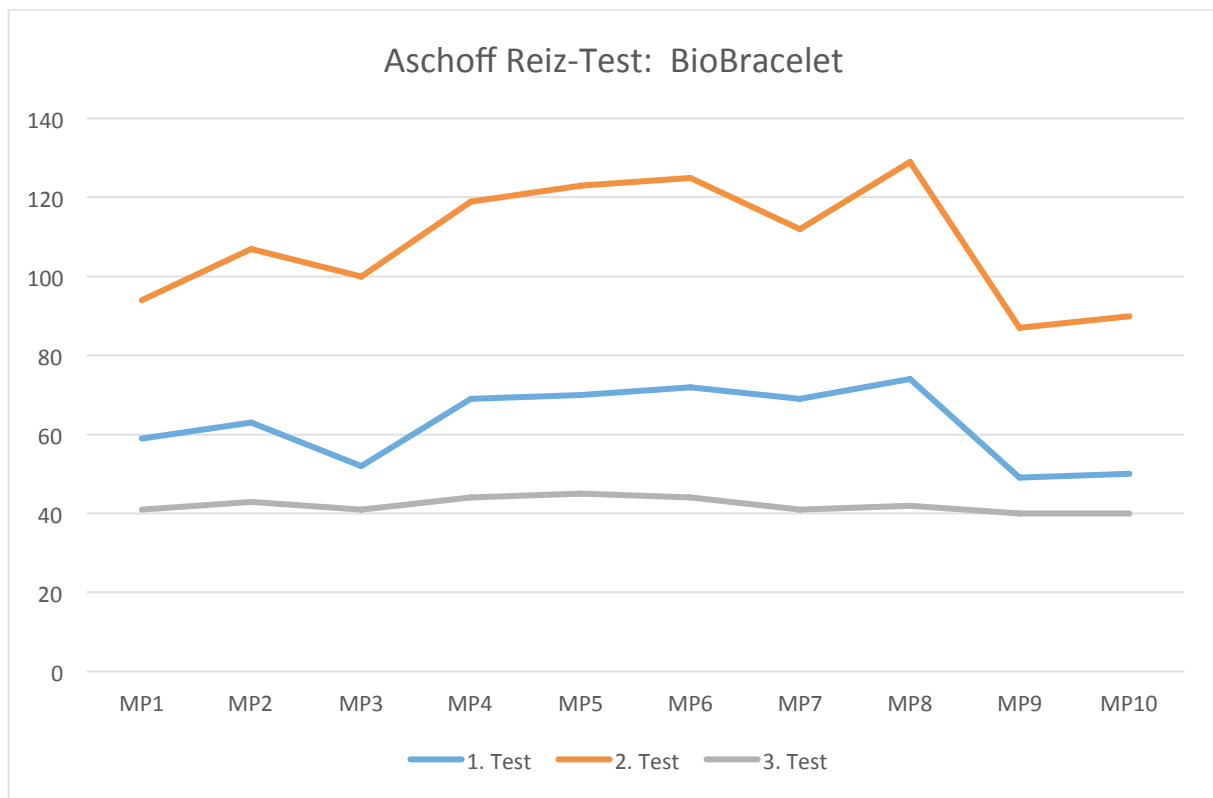

The standard value of a healthy person runs at about 40 kilo ohm. But this value is generally not achieved. Usually the value is up to 60 - 70 kilo ohm.

MP 1 - 10 are the 10 metering points on the fingers.

The first measurement is taken without putting any strain on the proband.

The second measurement is taken with added strain on the proband but without the BioBracelet. (red line in the graph)

The third measurement is taken with added strain on the proband but with the BioBracelet. (grey line in the graph)

The outcome:

The first reading shows only a clear divergence of the general skin resistance value of 40 kilo ohm. The first reading already shows the proband's (64 years old male) exposure to pathogenic sources of irritation, because the measured data is above the normal standard of 40 kilo ohm. The sources for this fact have been traced back to electromagnetic fields.

At the second reading the proband is exposed to extensive electromagnetic contamination in form of the high frequency radiation from two mobile phones and the low frequency electromagnetic field of a current-carrying electrical wire. The red line in the graph shows a significant increase of the skin resistance, which implies a strong health risk.

The measured data of the third reading is remarkable low even though the proband is still exposed to the same electromagnetic contamination as at the second reading -- but with the difference of carrying the BioBracelet on his arm. The measured data are below the data of the first reading and almost reach the normal value of 40 kilo ohm. This allows only one conclusion:

The BioBracelet made by SWISS HARMONY generates a healthful energy field, which completely neutralizes the bad effects from electromagnetic and other pathogenic energy fields. The BioBracelet by SWISS HARMONY is a very valuable bio-energetic device.
